CONFEREES SEEK AN AGREEMENT

Exclusion Provisions of the Immigration Bill Up.

TO MEET AGAIN TOMORROW

President. • Favor of Excluding Japanese, but Would Do So as Courteously as Possible — Speculation Heard as to the Status of Secretary Hughes—Advocates of Farm Relief Bill Seek President's Aid.

Washington, May 5.—Senate and house conferees on the immigration bill will meet again tomorrow in an effort to reach an agreement on the Japanese exclusion provisions of the bill.

Conferees declare that the policy of exclusion is fixed; that their sole object is to prevent the unnecessary embarrassment of the president in his handling of foreign relations.

A white house statement that President Coolidge is in favor of excluding Japanese, as courteously as possible, but still excluding them, and the strong intimation that he will sign the new immigration bill containing the exclusion clause, aroused considerable speculation here as to the status of Secretary of State Hughes. Outwardly, at least, the president and his secretary of state are thus disclosed to be on opposite sides of one of the most important questions of foreign policy that has come up in years. Certainly it is the gravest foreign issue that has confronted Mr. Coolidge.

Secretary Hughes has consistently opposed any legislation that would bar the Japanese by statute. Even while the present immigration bill was being written in the house immigration committee, Mr. Hughes sent a letter to Chairman Johnson, urging that Japan be allowed a quota of immigration just as any other country whose nationals are eligible to citizenship. He told members of congress that if they passed the exclusion act, it would undo the work of 20 years' careful diplomacy in the far east.

Advocates of McNary-Haugen agricultural export bill decided to seek the aid of President Coolidge in their fight to bring about enactment of the measure. In the house, leaders of the farm bloc began the circulation of petitions which will be transmitted to the white house early this week. They point out the need of legislation along the lines of the McNary-Haugen bill, set forth that there is overwhelming sentiment in the farming regions for its passage and urge that its enactment be facilitated.

Columbus, May 5.—It is officially announced that Dr. Aaron S. Watkins of Cincinnati will deliver the keynote address Wednesday, June 4, at the Ohio state prohibition convention to be held in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, preceding the national convention in Memorial hall June 5 and 6. Reports of committees on credentials, permanent organization and rules will be given in the afternoon, to be followed by addresses by Dr. R. E. P. Prugh of Harrisburg, Pa., and J. Sale of Drugs Declining.

Washington, May 5.—Commissioner L. G. Nutt, head of the narcotic division of the prohibition unit, reports that illegal importation, sale and use of narcotic drugs is rapidly declining. Opium importations were shown to have fallen from 471,000 pounds annually for the 10 years prior to 1915, when the Harrison act became effective, to less than 136,000 pounds in 1922, with a reduction in per capita consumption from 36 grains to 7 grains.

Austrian government announced it had given recognition to Russia.

MISS JULIA BANKS

Girl Admits Charge.

Bakersfield, Cal., May 5.—Eleanor Walling, 19, pleaded guilty to the charge of having been leader of a bandit gang that held up and robbed the state bank at Taft, Cal., March 31, of $5,000. Miss Walling, an accomplished violinist, although confessing her part in the holdup and leading officers to the hiding place of the major portion of the loot, steadfastly refused to name her companions in the holdup. "I am pleading guilty to protect an innocent girl friend," she declared.

Earthquake tremors were felt at Paducah, Ky., and vicinity. No damage was caused.

SENATE LIKELY TO UPHOLD VETO

Pursom Pension Measure to Be Called Up Tomorrow.

LEADERS EXPRESS OPINIONS

Author of Bill, However, Declares He Expects the Senate to Override the Veto—President Coolidge's Action Taken on the Ground of Economy. Essence of the President's Veto Message.

Washington, May 5.—Republican leaders in the senate expressed the opinion that President Coolidge will be sustained in his veto of the Pursom-Fuller pension bill.

The matter will be called up in the senate tomorrow. The bill provides for increases in the pensions of the veterans of all wars up to and including the Spanish-American war, and of widows and dependents of veterans of all wars from 1812 to 1902. Civil war veterans would have their pensions increased from $50 to $72 a month and their widows, now getting $30 a month, would receive $35 and $45 a month, dependent on age. Veterans of Spanish-American war and other wars, excepting the world war, and their widows would receive proportionate increase.

Senator Pursom (Rep., N. M.), author of the bill, said today he expected the senate to override the president's veto. He pointed to the vote of 51 to 16 by which the senate passed the measure last month. The house approved the measure without a record vote.

President Coolidge, in his message, said that he objected primarily to the bill because it would entail an "unwarranted expenditure of the money of the taxpayers at a time when the burden on the taxpayers must not be increased; it must be decreased." He added: "The desire to do justice to pensioners, however great their merit, must be attended by some solicitude to do justice to taxpayers. The advantage of a class can not be greater than the welfare of the nation."

A similar pension measure was passed by the last congress and vetoed by President Harding on the grounds of economy and also on the grounds that it was loosely drawn and would have put on the pension roll almost every widow of a Civil war veteran, regardless of when she was married.

Members of the Ohio congressional delegation say they are ready to assist in overriding the veto of the Pursom bill. The Buckeye state has more pensioners than any other state in the Union, which is said to be one reason for the standpoint attitude of the Ohio members.

CONTRACTORS TO DO WORK

Buildings to Be Erected on the State Farm in Lorain County.

Columbus, May 5.—The state welfare department and the state architect are perfecting plans for starting the erection of buildings for which $500,000 is available, at the new Grafton farm in Lorain county. During the past week Dr. Guy Williams, superintendent of the Cleveland state hospital, called on Welfare Director Harper and later held conferences with the state architect regarding the detailed plans for the Grafton building. Mr. Harper said that work would start just as soon as the extent of the water supply for the proposed institution is determined. Four wells have been drilled on the site and measurements show that the supply is sufficient for an institution of 1,000 patients. This water is now being analyzed by the state department of health and just as soon as this report is received work will start.

The first work at Grafton will be the erection of a power plant, storage house, laundry plant and an administration building. Units of these plants will be sufficient to care for the needs of an institution with upwards of 2,000 patients. The work will not be done by prisoners, but by contractors, and bids will be advertised just as soon as the plans are completed.

Low Wages Affects Service.

Washington, May 5.—Measures to check the deterioration of the postal service in the large cities of the country, due principally to the inadequate pay of employes and congested working quarters, are proposed in a report just made public by the chamber of commerce of the United States. Conditions in many cities, notably in Detroit, Boston, Cleveland, New York and Chicago, are such, the committee finds, that prompt relief is necessary.

AIMED AT RAIL LABOR BOARD

Bill to Abolish It May Be Considered by House.

TEST VOTE EXPECTED TODAY

May Settle Question Whether Railroad Legislation Will Be Taken Up at the Present Session of Congress. Resolutions Introduced in House to Ascertain Strength of the American Navy.

Washington, May 5.—The house is expected to vote today on a motion to consider a bill abolishing the present railroad labor board and setting up new machinery for adjustment of railroad labor disputes.

With a majority of members present railroad labor board and setting immediate consideration, one of the most important pieces of railroad legislation pending will be started on its way through congress. The effect of such action by the house, it is expected, will force the committee to report at once other railroad legislation for its action.

The labor board bill comes before the house under unusual circumstances. For the first time under a new rule, a powerful committee of the house is to be discharged from consideration of legislation because it has failed to act upon it and the legislation thrown into the house without committee consideration.

The bill was introduced in both houses early in March by Congressman Barkley (Dem., Ky.) and Senator Howell (Rep., Neb.). A subcommittee of the senate interstate commerce committee has not completed hearings on the bill. The house committee decided to take up other legislation first, realizing hearings on the labor board bill would be long drawn out.

Representative Barkley, member of the house committee, became impatient and under the new rule got 169 congressmen to sign a resolution of discharge of the committee. Discharge of the committee is being fought bitterly by a majority of its members.

Two resolutions were introduced in the house in an effort to ascertain the present strength of the United States navy. One was offered by Representative Britten (Rep., Ill.) and the other by Representative Rogers (Rep., Mass.).

The Britten resolution also seeks information from the navy department as to strength in various particulars of the British and Japanese navies.

The senate is expected to pass the tax reduction bill before the end of the week. The income schedule is now under consideration.

The commission will study market conditions in Great Britain, France and Germany.

AGAINST WORLD LEAGUE

Mrs. Upton Fears Attempt to Stampede Women Delegates.

Washington, May 5.—Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton of Warren, O., vice chairman of the executive committee of the Republican national committee, declared here that any attempt that may be made to stampede the women delegates to the Cleveland national convention into demanding a league of nations plank in the Republican platform will meet with firm opposition. "I am for peace, always have been for peace and always will be for peace," Mrs. Upton said, "but I have never been for the league of nations, for I have never believed it would make for peace. President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes in recent addresses declared that they regarded our country's rejection of the covenant of the league of nations as final. I am heartily in accord with this view. We have definitely rejected the league of nations. I broach the subject of the league of nations because I know that many women in their desire for peace seized upon the idea of the league as the way to end war and some still cling to this idea. The United States outside the league of nations has done more to help Europe than any nation inside the league, and we have been able to do this because of the very fact that we are outside the league."

COAN ACCUSED

Contempt Proceedings May Be Instituted Against Walsh.

Washington, May 5.—Senator Walsh (Dem., Mont.), member of the senate oil committee, suggested contempt proceedings against Blair Coan, one of the witnesses in the senate's investigation of the indictment of Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.). It is alleged that Coan had claimed to have uncovered evidence in Montana warranting Senator Walsh's indictment. The senator read a telegram from Coan denying he had made such a claim, but he added he had the statement of several newspapermen that Coan did make such a statement. In his testimony before the Wheeler committee last week Coan declared he had been sent to Montana by the Republican national committee to investigate not only Senator Wheeler, "but another senator," also. He was not permitted to put the name of the second senator into the record. The statement referred to by Senator Walsh was said to have been made privately after Coan left the stand.

Or Hooks and Eyes

A little South Carolina girl writes this one to the Columbia Record: "A man went to the hospital to have an operation, after the operation was over the doctor missed his gloves, then cut the man open and got the gloves out after they had sewed him up the doctor missed his towel and they had to cut him open again, when they sewed him up the doctor missed his scissors, the doctor said: 'look here man I have to cut you open again and get my scissors.' The man said: 'Next time you cut me open just put buttons and button holes on me so you can go in and out when you please.'"

Elysium

The name Elysium is given in classical mythology to the region where the souls of the good dwell after death. The location of Elysium varied with the fancy of the writer. Homer placed it on the west of the earth, near the ocean, and described it as a happy land, fanned by the delightful breezes of Zephyrus. According to Hesiod and Pindar, Elysium was in the islands of the Blessed, in the western ocean (whence arose the notion of the fabulous island of Atlantis), while Vergil located it in the underworld, with an entrance near Lake Avernus, in Campania.

Power of Warships

The total electric energy generated by the six electric battleships, 144,000 kilowatts, if applied to other purposes than driving ships, would—
Light an ordinary household lamp for 657 years.
Operate 3,200 street cars.
Pull 48 electric passenger trains out of the Grand Central terminal in New York.
If applied to a suitable Jack would lift a mountain of solid rock 5,000 feet high and 5,000 feet in diameter at the base at the rate of one foot a day.
If used to pump water it would lower the level of Lake Michigan ten feet a year.
If applied to the projection of shells, shooting directly upward, it would bombard the moon at the rate of 200 tons of shells a day.
Would supply the necessary electricity for light, heat and power for 600 towns of 5,000 population each.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Verdant Steppes

With his head resting upon the cushions of the carriage, and his arms crossed upon his breast, Lavretsky let his glance wander over the plowed fields which unfolded themselves before him like a fan, upon the cyprus which seemed to fly, upon the crows and magpies which with eyes stupidly suspicious followed the carriage as it passed, and upon the little ditches overgrown with southernwood, absinthie and the wild service tree. He regarded the horizon, this solitude of the steppes, so unbroken, so fresh, so fertile; this verdure, these long uplands, these hollows overgrown with bushes of dwarf oak, these gray villages, these scraggy birch trees; on all this picture of Russian nature, which he had not seen for so long, awakened feelings at once sweet and sad in his heart.—Turgenev.

The Proud Papa

"Gabe Giggery and Bill-Dick Prout had a dickens of a fight tuther day over which'n has got the smartest bunch of children on the Ridge," related Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge.
"Well, how did they settle it?" asked the presiding elder.
"They didn't; I've got the smartest children on the Ridge or any place else!"

Timely Warning

"He dances beautifully," sighed the impressionable girl.
"Take my advice," answered Miss Cayenne, "and don't deprive society of his accomplishment. It would be a shame for him to get married and have to stay home nights."

Chinese Found America

In 1761 the distinguished sinologist, De Guignes, published a paper which he had found in the works of early Chinese historians, in which appeared the statement that in the Fifth century certain travelers of their race had discovered a country which they called "Fu-sang," which from the distance and direction described by them appears to have been northwest America. The original document, according to the author of "Fu-sang, or the Discovery of America by Chinese Priests in the Fifth Century," was the report of the priest-missionary, Hsüi-Shün. In the year 499 A. D., who returned from a long journey to the East. The report was entered in the year book of the Chinese empire, and while the evidence offered is limited, it has every appearance of being a serious state document.
Archibell, in his "Sunset Canada: British Columbia and Beyond," says there is a history of Vancouver Island that is clouded in the vapor and incense of China. The stranger or the "native" of Vancouver Island quickly and constantly observes the resemblance of the Indians to the Chinese and Japanese. Merely circumstantial evidence would point to very early visits of Chinese voyagers to this coast—whether intent on voyages of discovery, or in ships driven across the Pacific by storms is a matter of speculation. Chinese junks and vessels were blown across the Pacific as late as the last century, and the sailors captured and enslaved by the Indians.—Detroit News.

Odd Tahiti Rite

The rite of fire-walking in Tahiti as practiced by the priests is explained as follows: The stones used are basalt, of volcanic origin, porous and nonconductive. A stone heated red-hot at one end remains comparatively cool at the other. Because of this fact the native priests and their acolytes may with impunity walk over the surface of the glowing rocks.

"Stinging Tree"

The "stinging tree," a leucous shrub, is a curious plant of Queensland, Australia. It has a peculiar odor and when touched it leaves no mark, but the pain is maddening and for months afterward the affected part is tender when touched in wet weather or when it becomes wet in washing.

Or Hooks and Eyes

A little South Carolina girl writes this one to the Columbia Record: "A man went to the hospital to have an operation, after the operation was over the doctor missed his gloves, then cut the man open and got the gloves out after they had sewed him up the doctor missed his towel and they had to cut him open again, when they sewed him up the doctor missed his scissors, the doctor said: 'look here man I have to cut you open again and get my scissors.' The man said: 'Next time you cut me open just put buttons and button holes on me so you can go in and out when you please.'"

Elysium

The name Elysium is given in classical mythology to the region where the souls of the good dwell after death. The location of Elysium varied with the fancy of the writer. Homer placed it on the west of the earth, near the ocean, and described it as a happy land, fanned by the delightful breezes of Zephyrus. According to Hesiod and Pindar, Elysium was in the Islands of the Blessed, in the western ocean (whence arose the notion of the fabulous island of Atlantis), while Vergil located it in the underworld, with an entrance near Lake Avernus, in Campania.

Power of Warships

The total electric energy generated by the six electric battleships, 144,000 kilowatts, if applied to other purposes than driving ships, would—
—Light an ordinary household lamp for 657 years.
—Operate 3,200 street cars.
—Pull 48 electric passenger trains out of the Grand Central terminal in New York.

If applied to a suitable jack would lift a mountain of solid rock 5,000 feet high and 5,000 feet in diameter at the base at the rate of one foot a day.

If used to pump water it would lower the level of Lake Michigan ten feet a year.

If applied to the projection of shells, shooting directly upward, it would bombard the moon at the rate of 200 tons of shells a day.

Would supply the necessary electricity for light, heat and power for 600 towns of 5,000 population each.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

HERRICK DRY AIR SYSTEM REFRIGERATOR

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.

No. 2. Effective insulation.

No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

Trifles Used Are Odd and Artistic

Numerous Gay Decorations Among Accessories for Milady's Apparel.

Quaint jingles are attached to a card of little ornaments made of ribbon and silk flowers, called lingerie sets—rings, rosettes, bow-knots and streamers which are sewn on the front or the shoulders of white and light-colored underwear. Most of these dainty tricks are done in Dresden colors, but there are as many shades as there are silks and chiffons of which the lingerie is made: pale rose, blue, yellow, green, orchid and violet. And with each card is a merry little verse.

Things to intrigue the fancy of elegantes are the little fans that have just been received from Paris by an exclusive New York shop. Novelties in fans are of a variety as great as the new fashions in stockings. The latest, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, are the reverse idea of the huge feather, spangled and lace affairs that have been conspicuous and popular through the winter season.

One of the daintiest of these small fans is a high oval, when open, brown Spanish lace over cream gauze covering the sticks, which are of fragrant sandalwood, delicately carved. Others have ribs of ivory, of mother-of-pearl, tortoise-shell or amber, and are covered with lace, the most charming having no underlining of silk or other material, and showing the lace in the filmy beauty of its pattern.

Among these fans are some of such intrinsic artistic value as to be included in the catalog of a museum of fine arts. An ingenious novelty is a little fan of white satin, with spangles and lace applique, which, when closed, "breaks" in the middle and folds to a length of four inches—to be easily carried in an evening bag. It may be mentioned that these fans, with a few exceptions, are not costly. They make the most graceful gifts.

The mah jong fad has been carried into some of the accessories of dress, and is found just now in umbrellas and parasols. The newest are short and chubby, even more so than were those of last season, when the club-like handles with short, blunt ferrules were introduced. They are made also on frames like those of the Japanese paper sunshades, of bamboo, the ribs close together. The handles, of colored wood, highly polished, of ivory or of colored composition, are marked with the figures and the pawns—to use a chess phrase—of the Chinese game. The covers of the parasols are almost all of gaily colored silk, brilliant green and flamingo red being much used.

Quite the most fantastic sunshade seen in many seasons is one of black silk, covered almost to the outer edges with white rabbit fur. In the very middle of the parasol when open the head of a pussycat is reproduced, the eyes and nose being made of imitation tortoise shell, the ears and whiskers standing out briskly. When the shade is closed it appears to be a bunch of folded (imitation) ermine, with an ornament of tortoise shell—that being the kitten's nose. Notwithstanding the childishness of the conceit, it is accomplished with such success as to gain it importance as a novelty.

Taffeta and Milan Used for an All-Black Hat

Dignity is the keynote of this Marie spring hat in which taffeta is intertwined with the milan straw of the crown and also used as a facing. It's all in black.

Waistcoats Are Made of Woolens and Linens

The prestige of the tailleur for the season is assured. One of the signs is the waistcoat, the new, ultra-smart affair that is cut so severely as to be easily mistaken for a man's "vest," that detail in which he appears always to have a particular pride.

The present model for women is a distinct contradiction to the loose overblouse. It is fitted trim and presupposes a soft shirtwaist or guimpe, a strictly tailored skirt, plaited or plain, and a severely plain coat. It is a compromise between the tailored suit with normal waistline, shirtwaist and belt, and the elongated blouse that has lately been in favor, dropping the waistline to an indefinite point.

Some of the new waistcoats are made of somewhat "loud" patterns in woolens and linens—gay checks and blocks and stripes—yellow and green, black and white, scarlet and white, and endless other striking combinations and contrasts.

Keeping Air Moist

In homes heated by hot air furnaces, with registers in the floor, it is a good plan to keep cans of water hung in the register. Any handy person can make holes in a tin can in which to fasten a wire bale, and this can be hung on a narrow strip of wood "set" across the furnace pipe, just below the floor level. A two-quart can will require filling twice a week. This will not only prevent the furniture from drying out, but is an aid to the health of the family, as it keeps the air moist.

Mastodon and Mammoth

The mammoth was an elephant, now extinct, related to and nearly the same size as the existing Indian elephant. It, however, had a long, thick, hairy coat and very long, upward-turning tusks. The mastodon is any of the numerous species of extinct elephants, which differ from the mammoth chiefly in the molar teeth, which have high conical cusps or parallel ridges with little or no cement in the interspaces. Some have small tusks in the lower jaw besides those in the upper jaw.

The Hittites

That the Hittites were in constant communication with other nations is shown by the fact that Egyptian scarabs and maulets, Phoenician pottery and Greek terra cotta figures are found in the tombs of different periods. Bronze daggers and jewelry are fairly common and a safety pin, 3,000 years old, that would still work, is said to have been found.

A two-quart can will require filling twice a week. This will not only prevent the furniture from drying out, but is an aid to the health of the family, as it keeps the air moist.

Mastodon and Mammoth

The mammoth was an elephant, now extinct, related to and nearly the same size as the existing Indian elephant. It, however, had a long, thick, hairy coat and very long, upward-turning tusks. The mastodon is any of the numerous species of extinct elephants, which differ from the mammoth chiefly in the molar teeth, which have high conical cusps or parallel ridges with little or no cement in the interspaces. Some have small tusks in the lower jaw besides those in the upper jaw.

The Hittites

That the Hittites were in constant communication with other nations is shown by the fact that Egyptian scarabs and maulets, Phoenician pottery and Greek terra cotta figures are found in the tombs of different periods. Bronze daggers and jewelry are fairly common and a safety pin, 3,000 years old, that would still work, is said to have been found.

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective Insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

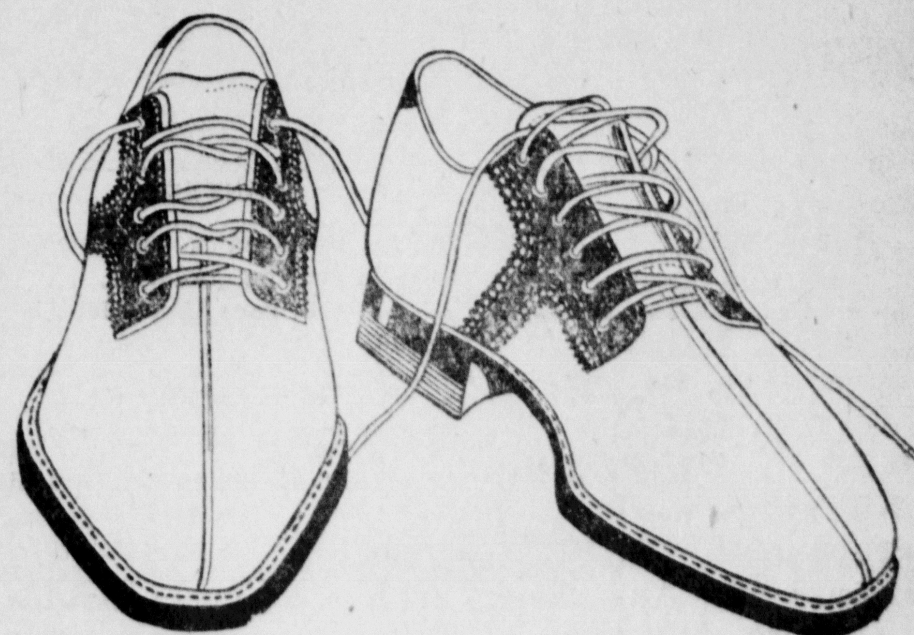

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

HICKLE'S INSTITUTE

Vaporized Mineral Health Treatment at Lancaster Newly Equipped.

We are pleased to announce that Class sanatorium has passed into the full ownership and control of George M. Hickie, who is now the proprietor and manager under the new name of the Hickie Vaporized Mineral Health Institute.

After a year of work and experience, we found that to do our best it would be necessary to install a new and improved equipment, which has been done.

We are now equipped with reclining cabinets, that the patients may relax and be comfortable during the treatment. With these are provided improved generators. The minerals used will be of like or superior quality.

An electric vibrator will also be used as a massage.

For the requirements of our patients we will have the genial Dr. Harry L. Bounds, who will diagnose your case at the institute, if needed, and will be helpful in watching the progress of your case. The cooperation of your own physician is desired.

We treat for the elimination of poison and gases, that bring or retain special diseases—the purifying of the blood and the stimulating of the circulation, which aid in overcoming disease by the Vaporized Mineral baths.

Competent aids are always in charge of the treatment rooms.

HANDWRITING
ON THE WALL*Death Warrant Signed for Old Reliable Votegetter, Cucumber Seed.

Senators and Representatives Cannot Comic Valentine Constituents With Horseradish and Artichoke Seeds That Stay Under Ground.

As a great national election draws nigh, the campaign cigar, which in the past has brought so many voters, for the other fellow—today saw the writing on the wall.

The writing on the wall was in the form of a final death warrant for that other reliable old vote-getter, the cucumber seed. It appeared certain today that the senate would not restore to the agricultural appropriations bills setting aside $360,000 for free seeds just killed in the house. Representative E. Lozier, of Missouri, supplied congress with some enlightening letters that made up the legislators' minds. The letters were from farm organizations, protesting an attempt to revive the ancient practice of senators and representatives comic valentining their constituents with horseradish and artichoke seeds that stayed under ground like the bottom of a well.

The practice of congress distributing free seeds, wrote J. W. Coverdale secretary of the American Farm Bureau Federation is "a disgusting form of electioneering." Farmers do not want their representatives, Coverdale wrote, to send out "free cucumber seeds designed primarily to take the place of the campaign cigar." Time was when the folks back home got envelope upon envelope of seeds from their congressmen and senators. Then, on election day, the cucumber lover, the votaries, the succulent tomatoes, the nibblers of sandy and string spinach and the slaves of cold-slaw went to the polls and voted the ticket straight.

The letters, some of which said the seeds never grew anything but weeds left the house wondering if the writers meant the seeds were as bad as their kindred vegetable, the campaign cigar. Several congressmen furtively drew cigars from their pockets, sniffed them and put them back with the thought that, perhaps, they better had smoke them themselves.

AT THE COURT HOUSEDivorce Granted.

Frank Fuller was given a divorce from Marie Fuller in probate court Saturday by Judge Adkins on the grounds of gross neglect. The defendant did not contest the suit. Barton Walters represented the plaintiff.

Bethel Will Probated.

The will of Walter A. Bethel, of Walnut township, has been probated. The estate is given to his wife for life and after her death it is given to his son, Lester Ardith Bethel. The estate is estimated to be worth $8,500 of which $500 is personal.

Suit For Damages.

Goldie M. Myers, as administrator of the estate of Kenneth Myers, deceased, has filed a civil action for damages in common pleas court against Dr. Wilson L. Peters for money only amount claimed $10,891. The plaintiff says that December 31, 1923, Kenneth Myers, her son, was wounded in the hand by the explosion of a blank cartridge and was given temporary treatment by the defendant. Tetanus developed and he was later taken to a hospital in Columbus where tetanus anti-toxin was administered. The young man died about a week after being taken to the hospital. Plaintiff says that the expense of treatment amounted to $105, attending physicians $134, nursing, $17, funeral expenses $635. She charges the defendant with a wrongful act, neglect and default in that he failed to administer tetanus anti-toxin and that his death was due to this neglect. Judge Charles Dresbach and Abernethy & Simkins represent the plaintiff.

AMUSEMENTS

The old Spanish gowns worn by Pola Negri in her latest Paramount star picture, "The Spanish Dancer," which will be on view at the Metropolitan theater this evening, constitute a veritable fashion display, which will enthuse almost every woman screen fan. Some of the costumes worn by the famous star in the scenes taken in the gypsy camp show the strong influence which the Moorish invasion exercised over Spanish life even after it had been repulsed. Later in the story, when Pola Negri as Maritana, the gypsy girl, becomes the wife of Don Cesar, she wears costumes which for sheer beauty have probably never been equalled by the gowns of any other period in history.

Kathlyn Williams, who plays the role of Isabella, queen of Spain, displays gowns designed from those shown in the hundred odd pictures which Velasquez painted of that famous queen. A number of ladies in waiting also appear in the picture. Seven different gowns were designed for each. In "The Spanish Dancer," Antonio Moreno is featured. Heading a strong cast are Wallace Berry as King Philip, Gareth Hughes an armorer's assistant, Adolphe Menjou, a powerful minister in the Spanish court — Edward Kipling, Robert Brower and many others.

Effect of Frost on Apples and Spuds.

Certain varieties of apples are not appreciably injured by being frozen if the frost is drawn out gradually. Apples will carry safely in a refrigerator car while the mercury is registering fully 20 degrees below zero. Potatoes being so largely composed of water, are easily frozen. Once touched by frost they are ruined.

Just as Egyptians Did.

The best-known method of flooring is known as "tongued," and the Egyptians knew how to do that, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. Both edges are grooved and a flat dowel, made as a separate piece, fits in both grooves and serves as the tongue.

Peters for money only amount claimed $10,891. The plaintiff says that December 31, 1923, Kenneth Myers, her son, was wounded in the hand by the explosion of a blank cartridge and was given temporary treatment by the defendant. Tetanus developed and he was later taken to a hospital in Columbus where tetanus anti-toxin was administered. The young man died about a week after being taken to the hospital. Plaintiff says that the expense of treatment amounted to $105, attending physicians $134, nursing, $17, funeral expenses $635. She charges the defendant with a wrongful act, neglect and default in that he failed to administer tetanus anti-toxin and that his death was due to this neglect. Judge Charles Dresbach and Abernethy & Simkins represent the plaintiff.

AMUSEMENTS

The old Spanish gowns worn by Pola Negri in her latest Paramount star picture, "The Spanish Dancer," which will be on view at the Metropolitan theater this evening, constitute a veritable fashion display, which will enthuse almost every woman screen fan. Some of the costumes worn by the famous star in the scenes taken in the gypsy camp show the strong influence which the Moorish invasion exercised over Spanish life even after it had been repulsed. Later in the story, when Pola Negri as Maritana, the gypsy girl, becomes the wife of Don Cesar, she wears costumes which for sheer beauty have probably never been equalled by the gowns of any other period in history.

Kathlyn Williams, who plays the role of Isabella, queen of Spain, displays gowns designed from those shown in the hundred odd pictures which Velasquez painted of that famous queen. A number of ladies in waiting also appear in the picture. Seven different gowns were designed for each. In "The Spanish Dancer," Antonio Moreno is featured. Heading a strong cast are Wallace Berry as King Philip, Gareth Hughes an armorer's assistant, Adolphe Menjou, a powerful minister in the Spanish court—Edward Kipling, Robert Brower and many others.

Effect of Frost on Apples and Spuds.

Certain varieties of apples are not appreciably injured by being frozen if the frost is drawn out gradually. Apples will carry safely in a refrigerator car while the mercury is registering fully 20 degrees below zero. Potatoes being so largely composed of water, are easily frozen. Once touched by frost they are ruined.

Just as Egyptians Did.

The best-known method of flooring is known as "tongued," and the Egyptians knew how to do that, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. Both edges are grooved and a flat dowel, made as a separate piece, fits in both grooves and serves as the tongue.

Personality.

The greatest and most vital power in influencing life is personality. It is greater than law, instruction or example.—Lyman Abbott.

Almost Too Good an Excuse.
Sarah was invited with her older sister to take tea with a friend of her mother. The little girl was anxious to do her sister credit, but after sampling a piece of cake which she had taken upon her plate was unable to eat it because she did not like it. Her hostess, noticing this, said: "Why, Sarah, you haven't eaten your cake!" Drawing a long breath and not wishing to hurt her friend's feelings Sarah replied: "No, it is so good, I can't."

The referee and official starter was H. G. Olsen, of the O. S. U., with seven assistants also from O. S. U.

Due to the fact that Rush, of Scioto competed in too many events, his sixteen points were thrown out and other place holders advanced accordingly, except in 60 yard dash where fifth place is left open, because no fifth man was picked.

The Girl in Business.

The big difference between young men and women in business is that the former know they have many years of work ahead, while the latter often feel that their sojourn in the business world is to be temporary. Only to the extent that a girl considers her work as a lifetime affair, and accordingly devotes her whole heart and soul to it, can she succeed in rising above the rank and file.—Fortes Magazine.

Silk From Trees.

Little does one think, gazing at a dress of lustrous tricolette, or a gayly colored silken sweater, that the fabric from which they are fashioned once flourished in the form of a stately spruce or pine on some rocky mountainside in Sweden. For that is what our modern chemist has succeeded in making a fact. By a process as secret as that of the ancient chemist he produces silk from the pulp wood trees.

Pure Bred Bulls of Great Value

Sires of Quality Are Needed to Maintain and Increase Dairy Production.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A tabulation has just been completed by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in which the records of 384 grade daughters of pure bred dairy bulls were compared with the records of their dams. The average yearly butterfat production of the dams was 300 pounds, and that of the daughters 313 pounds. The daughters exceeded the dams with a margin of only 4 pounds of butterfat a year, but the fact that they excelled such high-producing dams at all speaks very well for the class of pure bred dairy bulls that is being used in the cow-testing association herds from which these records came. In this connection, estimates show that the average butterfat production of milk cows in the United States is only 100 pounds annually.

Records in Groups.

The records of the dams were arranged in five groups according to production of butterfat. These five groups averaged 100, 200, 300, 400 and 500 pounds, respectively. The daughters of the first or 100-pound group produced 74 pounds more butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the second group produced 55 pounds more butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the third group produced 9 pounds more butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the fourth group produced 26 pounds less butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the fifth or last group produced 86 pounds less butterfat than their dams.

Pure Breds Needed.

From these figures we may conclude that good pure bred bulls are needed for every dairy herd and that pure bred bulls selected from very high producing ancestry are required when the production records of the dams are above 300 pounds of butterfat a year. As the average production of herds advance, better and still better bulls are needed to maintain and to increase production.

New Bulletin Describes

Several Hog Operations

Castration of hogs under various conditions is described in detail in a new Farmers' Bulletin, No. 1357, by S. S. Buckley, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Besides giving directions for the ordinary operation, the bulletin gives the procedure for ridgelings, for spaying sows, and for operating on ruptured pigs. A number of illustrations help to make the methods easily understood.

In the case of males the operation of castration improves the quality of the meat and prevents the development of undesirable odors as well as doing away with the danger of indiscriminate breeding in the herd. Spaying is no longer practiced to any great extent as it has little influence on the quality of the meat. It is recommended that whenever possible the operation be done at an early age, preferably early enough so that the wounds will be healed before the pigs are weaned. It may be done at any season of the year, but on clear, cool days if the best results are to be obtained.

Copies of the bulletin may be obtained without cost, as long as the supply lasts, by addressing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Improving Live Stock by Using Pure Bred Sires

The number of persons in the United States co-operating in live stock improvement by the use of pure bred sires exclusively for all classes of live stock kept passed the 13,000 mark during March, according to records of the United States Department of Agriculture. This list of persons represents ownership of more than a million and a half animals and fowls used for breeding purposes, and includes breeders in all parts of the country. Each person co-operating with state extension workers and the United States Department of Agriculture by signing enrollment blanks in the better-sires drive receives a suitable certificate, and also, when requested, a lithographed sign, "Pure bred sires exclusively used on this farm."

Roughages for Cows

Good alfalfa hay is generally placed at the head of the list of roughages suitable for dairy cows. The value of alfalfa in the ration is often underestimated. There is no comparison between it and timothy as a dairy feed. A feeding experiment was recently conducted by the Indiana experiment station comparing alfalfa hay and timothy hay as a roughage for milk production. Throughout the comparison, a ration of corn silage and a grain mixture of four parts cracked corn, four parts ground oats and one part of oil meal by weight was fed. Alfalfa and timothy hay were fed alternately with this ration.

Bees Help Pollenization

A few stands of bees in the orchard also help during pollenization. But the spray outfit is one of the most important necessities for the present-day orchard. At least two sprays should be applied, one just after the petals have fallen, and one three weeks later.

Pure Bred Bulls of Great Value

Sires of Quality Are Needed to Maintain and Increase Dairy Production.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A tabulation has just been completed by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in which the records of 384 grade daughters of pure bred dairy bulls were compared with the records of their dams. The average yearly butterfat production of the dams was 309 pounds, and that of the daughters 313 pounds. The daughters exceeded the dams with a margin of only 4 pounds of butterfat a year, but the fact that they excelled such high-producing dams at all speaks very well for the class of pure bred dairy bulls that is being used in the cow-testing association herds from which these records came. In this connection, estimates show that the average butterfat production of milk cows in the United States is only 100 pounds annually.

Records in Groups.

The records of the dams were arranged in five groups according to production of butterfat. These five groups averaged 100, 200, 300, 400 and 500 pounds, respectively. The daughters of the first or 100-pound group produced 74 pounds more butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the second group produced 55 pounds more butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the third group produced 9 pounds more butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the fourth group produced 26 pounds less butterfat than their dams. The daughters of the fifth or last group produced 86 pounds less butterfat than their dams.

Pure Breds Needed.

From these figures we may conclude that good pure bred bulls are needed for every dairy herd and that pure bred bulls selected from very high producing ancestry are required when the production records of the dams are above 300 pounds of butterfat a year. As the average production of herds advance, better and still better bulls are needed to maintain and to increase production.

Newsprint Paper
Newsprint paper is mostly made of wood mechanically ground into a pulp. But the hardwoods are unsuitable because too much power is required to grind them. Only the long-fibered, light-colored, nonresinous balsams and spruces are important commercial sources of ground wood. Pulp made by this process cannot be used for print paper by itself. It needs to be strengthened by the addition of stronger fibered pulp, which is made by cooking chips of wood with a chemical under steam pressure in a specially designed cooker. In this process a large part of the wood known as lignin is removed, leaving fibers consisting of almost pure cellulose.

Couldn't Use It
"My beau is in the candy business," stammered Samuella. "He brings me oodles of bonbons."
"Mine is a florist," chirped Johnette. "He simply overwhelms me with the finest posies."
Haroldine was silent.
"What line is your young man in, dearie?" asked the others in chorus. "Tar roofing."

Metric System
The metric system of measurement was originated in 1786 by James Watt, the noted English inventor. One of the first nations to adopt this system was France during the French revolution. Lavoisier, the great French chemist, was the principal influence for its adoption. Today every civilized nation in the world, except the United States and Great Britain has adopted the metric system. These two English-speaking nations wrestle with a jumble of other systems, hence a strong demand that the world centralize on one popular system, the metric.

Origin of Sheep
Sheep are somewhat of a puzzle to naturalists. What race brought them from their wild roamings to serve man is not known. Perhaps they were the first of the animals to be domesticated. The wild sheep of today have much hair and scant wool. There are more than 200 different kinds of domestic sheep and the wool buyer knows more than 600 grades of wool.—Nature Magazine.

TEA-ROOM AND GASOLINE GAME

By CHARLOTTE E. WILLER

(Copyright 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THERE were Annie's tea-room and George's garage—one was about as good a business proposition as the other, and they faced each other across a highway. Annie offered tea and cinnamon toast and raspberry jam; that kind of thing. There were yellow curtains at the window, with green geese going up purple trees sideways; you know the sort of thing it was—strictly art.

George, on his side of the street, carried the best brand of gasoline and was to be seen running about—a little heavily—and stooping under cars—a little wheezy—and looking across the street—a little too often for the temper of his customers.

Now Annie was blessed with beauty and brains. She could run a tea-room with one hand. Consider the history of most tea-rooms; isn't it generally entitled "The Decline and Fall"? May 1, Open for Business. June 3, Closed for Repairs; June 23, This Space Will Be Occupied by the Scootum Garage, Day Soakem Oil.

Not so the Purple Parrot. Three times it closed for repairs and opened with extensions and improvements. Annie herself was not above tripping about with trays, whispering to one customer while she took cash from another and handed cake to a third.

It is easily to be understood, then, that George liked the institution of afternoon tea. He thought Annie ran her tea-room well, but he thought it would be still a better proposition to have Annie run George's tea-room well. So he came around, on an average once a week, to suggest it; but what he said was: "Annie, will you marry me?" Annie in reply always looked deeply touched, but answered: "George, dear, I can't make up my mind to it. If I married anyone, I'd marry you, but I can't see a particular reason for marrying anyone."

Then, one day, just as George had got through his question, quite without hope, she said, calmly, balancing the cake in one hand and the tea in the other, "All right, George, I'm yours. I think June 15 would be a good day for it."

When George came to, later in the afternoon, he was under the car. He wiped the grease out of one eye with the back of his hand and screamed for his young assistant, aged ten, all freckles and elbows. "Keep the shop," he commanded. "Give 'em gas and hold 'em for repairs. Back in ten minutes."

He chose the ring in seven minutes, paid down a fat sum and agreed to hand over the rest on June 25.

The next time he and Annie were taking time off in the little car, he said, casually: "I've sold the garage, honey."

Annie blinked her eyes twice and swallowed once. "But what can we live on?" she asked, with a voice that faded away to almost nothing when it got to the question mark.

George said, with quiet confidence: "We can put the capital into the tea-room; go into it on a partnership basis—expand it." He expanded his chest.

Annie cogitated. She couldn't seem to see George as a partner in that tea-room; unless it was as treasurer. Moreover, she could all too easily see herself, sweeping off an expanded floor space and waiting on more expanded tables.

"Oh," she said.
That night she thought hard and wrote a few letters. Then she slept the sleep of the just.

The first of July, she said casually, as she was sitting close to the driver of the family car: "I've sold the tea-room, George." George's foot came down hard on the accelerator and for a few minutes the world swung around like a spinning top, then it stuck fast, while the nose of the machine cuddled up a tree trunk.

The smallest kind of a voice came out of George's chest. "What—what are we going to live on?" he asked weakly.

"Ask me what I did with the money," she said, firmly, and smilingly.
"What?"

"I bought a garage—the garage. You know."

George did know. Annie went on pensively: "Of course we lost a bit on the transaction, but, after all, that was your fault, and," she added pleasantly, "you can make it up easy with your knack for the business."

George's admiration for her rose to white heat. Annie improved with age, like a fiddle. He'd rather be her garage-keeper than the head of anyone else's tea-room. He sent the car into high, down the long, white road toward home, and he said, as the wind rushed by them: "Sure, I'll have it a going concern in no time."

"Just as you say, dear," said the meek wife. But to herself she said: "I always did want to own a garage."

Baby's Halo

The young mother had just read in a new-thought paper that everyone is surrounded by a halo, the color of which is determined by the temperament of the person. When her husband came home she tackled him on the subject. After settling the color of all her neighbors' halos to her entire satisfaction, she remarked:

"And what about baby Alfred? What color is he, do you think? Pink, I imagine, because he's the pink of perfection."

"Well, my dear," replied her husband caustically, "he may be pink when I'm away, but when I'm home he's the most startling yellor."

MAKING IT HARD FOR BANK CROOKS

How the Nation's Bankers Are Banded Together in War on Crime—The Great Crook Trap and the Way It Works.

By JOHN OAKWOOD

The slick gentry who have been wont to walk into banks and mesmerize paying tellers into giving them good cash for worthless checks have recently become aware of the fact that their operations are daily growing more difficult. Crooks who have operated with apparent immunity for years have suddenly found themselves caught in the meshes of what amounts to a nation wide crook trap.

To show how effectively this is now working, one of the biggest figures among the worthless check operators, a man who claims to have defrauded dozens of banks and realized more than $300,000 from his operations, recently fell into the toils of the trap. Realizing that he was hopelessly caught, he made a complete confession.

This trap is conducted by the Protective Department of the American Bankers Association, which includes in its membership more than 22,000 banks that are thus leagued in a perpetual warfare against the army of bank crooks scattered throughout the nation.

A Dramatic Arrest

A dramatic illustration of the workings of the association's detective department was recently staged in Buffalo, N. Y., resulting in the sudden downfall of a pair of check swindlers and terminating a year's successful operations in some fifteen cities in various sections of the country.

The pair began their operations in Buffalo in the middle of January, one of them appearing at the special savings account window of a bank there.

He presented a counter check on the bank for $75.60, together with a deposit slip filled in for $20.60. He also presented a second deposit slip for $3, proffering with it $3 in currency. He told the teller that he wanted to deposit the two items, that is, $3 in cash and $20.60 out of the check, to the credit of his wife, explaining that he had forgotten to bring her book but would return with it later. His cash and the check were accepted, totaling $78.60. From this sum his wife's supposed account was credited with $23.60, the total of the two deposit slips, and he was given $55 cash in change.

After the man left the bank the teller became suspicious due to his prolonged failure to return as he had promised with his wife's deposit book. On investigation the check he had left was found to be worthless. The bank communicated with the local detective office of the association, giving a complete description of the man.

The Alarm Is Given

Later that same day the detective office received another report from a second bank that it had been similarly defrauded by a man answering the description given by the first bank. Steps were at once taken to set a trap for him should he attempt further operations. All surrounding banks were warned that he was in the vicinity and a complete description was given them of his appearance and of his mode of operating. They were advised to have their tellers and guards on the lookout and to communicate at once by telephone with the detective office in case anyone appeared in their lobbies who seemed to answer to the description of the man wanted. They were also instructed to take steps to detain him in the bank.

Early the next afternoon the telephone rang in the detective office and a message came from a third bank that they thought the man was in its lobby. Three detectives rushed to the bank in an automobile which had been held continuously in waiting. Two of the detectives covered the entrances of the bank and the third went into the lobby. He at once noticed a short, well dressed man standing at one side and watching the line of people at the tellers' windows. In the line he noticed a large man, answering the description of the bad check operator he was seeking.

The detective approached the man who at once scented trouble and tore up the papers he had in his hand, hiding the pieces in his pocket. At signs of his putting up a fight the detective grappled with him and called to his two associates at the doors to arrest the other man whom he had noticed as he entered. After a short struggle the two men were overpowered. When the larger of the two was searched a torn check was found in his pocket, made out in the same writing as the two that had been successfully passed the day before. A number of similar checks all prepared for use, were also found on his confederate. When confronted by the tellers of the banks who had been victimized the day before, the leader was readily identified. The two prisoners were hopelessly ensnared, admitted their guilt and in their hotel rooms were found a large number of checks, deposit slips and pass books of banks in various cities.

The Trap Sprung Again
Similar quick action of the bank crook trap in Boston terminated the career of another check forger who had been operating successfully in the New England states. The banks which he had victimized notified the American Bankers Association with the result that all other banks in the territory were warned against him and were put on guard. Therefore, when he walked into a Boston bank to continue his operations he walked into a trap as he was immediately recognized and nabbed by the officers there.

These are only two instances of many that have recently taken place in various parts of the country. Some of these arrests have brought into the toils of the authorities some of the slickest operators in this line in the country and from them have been learned the details of the way bank crooks operate, placing in the hands of the detective department the means to put banks on guard against further depredations.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON VI

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,

Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

We hear of bank capital, surplus and stockholders. What economic services do they render the community?

BANK CAPITAL—The money necessary to engage in the business of rendering banking services to the community.

SURPLUS—A part of a bank's earnings not paid out as dividends to stockholders but reserved for possible losses or to expand activities as needed by growing business.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS—Protection to depositors, because if trouble arises, depositors must be paid in full out of these funds if necessary before stockholders are paid anything.

BANK STOCKHOLDER—Anyone able and willing to buy stock in a bank and to assume the risk of the business. A share of stock represents a fraction of ownership in the whole, and with ownership go responsibilities and liabilities. In smaller communities those who usually organize banks interest successful farmers, successful merchants and successful manufacturers because of the influence they bring.

DOUBLE LIABILITY—The obligation under the law that rests on a bank stockholder, in case his bank fails and the assets are not enough to pay depositors, to pay an amount equal to his bank stock, in addition to losing his original investment. This is not the case in corporations other than banks. Example: If a man owned $1,000 in bank stock and the bank failed, and after the assets had been used, the bank still owed money to depositors, the stockholder would be required to pay up to another $1,000 if necessary to meet the obligations to depositors.

Thus it is seen that bank capital and bank stockholders perform real economic services.

Albinos.

The term "albino" was originally applied by the Portuguese to negroes found on the coast of Africa, who were mottled with white spots. Now an albino is defined as a person having a congenital deficiency of pigments of the skin, hair and eyes. Albinos occur among all races of men; in extreme cases they have a skin of a milky color, extremely light hair, and eyes with a deep red pupil with pink or blue iris.

Bats Not Classed as Birds.

The bureau of biological survey says that bats are not birds. They are mammals, though adapted to life in the air by the possession of wings formed by a membrane attached between the greatly prolonged bones of the arm and hand.

Newsprint Paper

Newsprint paper is mostly made of wood mechanically ground into a pulp. But the hardwoods are unsuitable because too much power is required to grind them. Only the long-fibered, light-colored, nonresinous balsams and spruces are important commercial sources of ground wood. Pulp made by this process cannot be used for print paper by itself. It needs to be strengthened by the addition of stronger fibered pulp, which is made by cooking chips of wood with a chemical under steam pressure in a specially designed cooker. In this process a large part of the wood known as lignin is removed, leaving fibers consisting of almost pure cellulose.

Metric System

The metric system of measurement was originated in 1788 by James Watt, the noted English inventor. One of the first nations to adopt this system was France during the French revolution. Lavoisier, the great French chemist, was the principal influence for its adoption. Today every civilized nation in the world, except the United States and Great Britain has adopted the metric system. These two English-speaking nations wrestle with a jumble of other systems, hence a strong demand that the world centralize on one popular system, the metric.

Origin of Sheep

Sheep are somewhat of a puzzle to naturalists. What race brought them from their wild roamings to serve man is not known. Perhaps they were the first of the animals to be domesticated. The wild sheep of today have much hair and scant wool. There are more than 200 different kinds of domestic sheep and the wool buyer knows more than 600 grades of wool.—Nature Magazine.

TEA-ROOM AND GASOLINE GAME

By CHARLOTTE E. WILLER
(© 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THERE were Annie's tea-room and Georgie's garage—one was about as good a business proposition as the other, and they faced each other across a highway. Annie offered tea and cinnamon toast and raspberry jam; that kind of thing. There were yellow curtains at the window, with green geese going up purple trees sideways; you know the sort of thing it was—strictly art.

Georgie, on his side of the street, carried the best brand of gasoline and was to be seen running about—a little heavily—and stooping under cars—a little wheezy—and looking across the street—a little too often for the temper of his customers.

Now Annie was blessed with beauty and brains. She could run a tea-room with one hand. Consider the history of most tea-rooms; isn't it generally entitled "The Decline and Fall"? May 1, Open for Business. June 3, Closed for Repairs; June 23, This Space Will Be Occupied by the Scootum Garage, Ray Soakem Oil.

Not so the Purple Parrot. Three times it closed for repairs and opened with extensions and improvements. Annie herself was not above tripping about with trays, whispering to one customer while she took cash from another and handed cake to a third.

It is easily to be understood, then, that Georgie liked the institution of afternoon tea. He thought Annie ran her tea-room well, but he thought it would be still a better proposition to have Annie run Georgie's tea-room well. So he came around, on an average once a week, to suggest it; but what he said was: "Annie, will you marry me?" Annie in reply always looked deeply touched, but answered: "Georgie, dear, I can't make up my mind to it. If I married anyone, I'd marry you, but I can't see a particular reason for marrying anyone."

Then, one day, just as Georgie had got through his question, quite without hope, she said, calmly, balancing the cake in one hand and the tea in the other, "All right, Georgie, I'm yours. I think June 15 would be a good day for it."

When Georgie came to, later in the afternoon, he was under the car. He wiped the grease out of one eye with the back of his hand and screamed for his young assistant, aged ten, all freckles and elbows. "Keep the shop," he commanded. "Give 'em gas and hold 'em for repairs. Back in ten minutes."

He chose the ring in seven minutes, paid down a fat sum and agreed to hand over the rest on June 25.

The next time he and Annie were taking time off in the little car, he said, casually: "I've sold the garage, honey."

Annie blinked her eyes twice and swallowed once. "But what can we live on?" she asked, with a voice that faded away to almost nothing when it got to the question mark.

Georgie said, with quiet confidence: "We can put the capital into the tea-room; go into it on a partnership basis—expand it." He expanded his chest.

Annie cogitated. She couldn't seem to see Georgie as a partner in that tea-room; unless it was as treasurer. Moreover, she could all too easily see herself, sweeping off an expanded floor space and waiting on more expanded tables.

"Oh," she said.

That night she thought hard and wrote a few letters. Then she slept the sleep of the just.

The first of July, she said casually, as she was sitting close to the driver of the family car: "I've sold the tea-room, Georgie." Georgie's foot came down hard on the accelerator and for a few minutes the world swung around like a spinning top, then it stuck fast, while the nose of the machine cuddled up a tree trunk.

The smallest kind of a voice came out of Georgie's chest. "What—what are we going to live on?" he asked weakly.

"Ask me what I did with the money," she said, firmly, and smilingly.

"What?"

"I bought a garage—the garage. You know."

Georgie did know. Annie went on pensively: "Of course we lost a bit on the transaction, but, after all, that was your fault, and," she added pleasantly, "you can make it up easy with your knack for the business."

Georgie's admiration for her rose to white heat. Annie improved with age, like a fiddle. He'd rather be her garage-keeper than the head of anyone else's tea-room. He sent the car into high, down the long, white road toward home, and he said, as the wind rushed by them: "Sure, I'll have it a going concern in no time."

"Just as you say, dear," said the meek wife. But to herself she said: "I always did want to own a garage."

Baby's Halo

The young mother had just read in a new-thought paper that everyone is surrounded by a halo, the color of which is determined by the temperament of the person. When her husband came home she tackled him on the subject. After settling the color of all her neighbors' halos to her entire satisfaction, she remarked:

"And what about baby Alfred? What color is he, do you think? Pink, I imagine, because he's the pink of perfection."

"Well, my dear," replied her husband caustically, "he may be pink when I'm away, but when I'm home he's the most startling yellor."

MAKING IT HARD FOR BANK CROOKS

How the Nation's Bankers Are Banded Together in War on Crime—The Great Crook Trap and the Way It Works.

By JOHN OAKWOOD

The slick gentry who have been wont to walk into banks and mesmerize paying tellers into giving them good cash for worthless checks have recently become aware of the fact that their operations are daily growing more difficult. Crooks who have operated with apparent immunity for years have suddenly found themselves caught in the meshes of what amounts to a nation wide crook trap.

To show how effectively this is now working, one of the biggest figures among the worthless check operators, a man who claims to have defrauded dozens of banks and realized more than $300,000 from his operations, recently fell into the toils of the trap. Realizing that he was hopelessly caught, he made a complete confession.

This trap is conducted by the Protective Department of the American Bankers Association, which includes in its membership more than 22,000 banks that are thus leagued in a perpetual warfare against the army of bank crooks scattered throughout the nation.

A Dramatic Arrest

A dramatic illustration of the workings of the association's detective department was recently staged in Buffalo, N. Y., resulting in the sudden downfall of a pair of check swindlers and terminating a year's successful operations in some fifteen cities in various sections of the country.

The pair began their operations in Buffalo in the middle of January, one of them appearing at the special savings account window of a bank there.

He presented a counter check on the bank for $75.60, together with a deposit slip filled in for $20.60. He also presented a second deposit slip for $3, proffering with it $3 in currency. He told the teller that he wanted to deposit the two items, that is, $3 in cash and $20.60 out of the check, to the credit of his wife, explaining that he had forgotten to bring her book but would return with it later. His cash and the check were accepted, totaling $78.60. From this sum his wife's supposed account was credited with $23.60, the total of the two deposit slips, and he was given $55 cash in change.

After the man left the bank the teller became suspicious due to his prolonged failure to return as he had promised with his wife's deposit book. On investigation the check he had left was found to be worthless. The bank communicated with the local detective office of the association, giving a complete description of the man.

The Alarm Is Given

Later that same day the detective office received another report from a second bank that it had been similarly defrauded by a man answering the description given by the first bank. Steps were at once taken to set a trap for him should he attempt further operations. All surrounding banks were warned that he was in the vicinity and a complete description was given them of his appearance and of his mode of operating. They were advised to have their tellers and guards on the lookout and to communicate at once by telephone with the detective office in case anyone appeared in their lobbies who seemed to answer to the description of the man wanted. They were also instructed to take steps to detain him in the bank.

Early the next afternoon the telephone rang in the detective office and a message came from a third bank that they thought the man was in its lobby. Three detectives rushed to the bank in an automobile which had been held continuously in waiting. Two of the detectives covered the entrances of the bank and the third went into the lobby. He at once noticed a short, well dressed man standing at one side and watching the line of people at the tellers' windows. In the line he noticed a large man, answering the description of the bad check operator he was seeking.

The detective approached the man who at once scented trouble and tore up the papers he had in his hand, hiding the pieces in his pocket. At signs of his putting up a fight the detective grappled with him and called to his two associates at the doors to arrest the other man whom he had noticed as he entered. After a short struggle the two men were overpowered. When the larger of the two was searched a torn check was found in his pocket, made out in the same writing as the two that had been successfully passed the day before. A number of similar checks all prepared for use, were also found on his confederate. When confronted by the tellers of the banks who had been victimized the day before, the leader was readily identified. The two prisoners were hopelessly ensnared, admitted their guilt and in their hotel rooms were found a large number of checks, deposit slips and pass books of banks in various cities.

The Trap Sprung Again

Similar quick action of the bank crook trap in Boston terminated the career of another check forger who had been operating successfully in the New England states. The banks which he had victimized notified the American Bankers Association with the result that all other banks in the territory were warned against him and were put on guard. Therefore, when he walked into a Boston bank to continue his operations he walked into a trap as he was immediately recognized and nabbed by the officers there.

These are only two instances of many that have recently taken place in various parts of the country. Some of these arrests have brought into the toils of the authorities some of the slickest operators in this line in the country and from them have been learned the details of the way bank crooks operate, placing in the hands of the detective department the means to put banks on guard against further depredations.

Aibinos.

The term "albino" was originally applied by the Portuguese to negroes found on the coast of Africa, who were mottled with white spots. Now an albino is defined as a person having a congenital deficiency of pigments of the skin, hair and eyes. Albinos occur among all races of men; in extreme cases they have a skin of a milky color, extremely light hair, and eyes with a deep red pupil with pink or blue irises.

Bats Not Classed as Birds.

The bureau of biological survey says that bats are not birds. They are mammals, though adapted to life in the air by the possession of wings formed by a membrane attached between the greatly prolonged bones of the arm and hand.

STEEL FREIGHTER

Big Vessel Will Carry Iron Ore From Ford Mines to Detroit.

Here in the heart of the Ford industries another step was taken recently to link these great manufacturing plants more closely and securely with the sources of raw materials, when the Ford Motor company's second steel freighters, the Benson Ford was launched at the shipyards of the Great Lakes Engineering works.

The ship, which is named after Henry Ford's grandson, Benson, second son of Edsel B. Ford, was launched at 11:30 a. m., April 28.

The new vessel will go into service about July 15, joining the Henry Ford II, which was launched about two months ago and will carry iron ore from the Ford mines in northern Michigan to the great blast furnaces at the River Rouge plant of the company at Detroit. On trips from Detroit the boats will carry Ford coal to the upper peninsula of Michigan.

The Benson Ford, which will be one of the largest lake freighters, is of standard type lake bulk freight steamer design, 612 feet over all, with a 62 foot beam and a cargo carrying capacity of 13,000 tons. It will carry a crew of approximately forty men.

Like the Henry Ford II, it is a motor ship, operated by a Diesel engine of the Sun Doxford two cycle type which will develop 3,000 horse power. Tanks with a capacity of 800 tons will carry fuel, oil for the operation of the main engines and the auxiliary Diesel motors which will drive the electric generators to provide electric current for the operation of the many pumps and auxiliaries.

The fresh water supply for the cabins is carried in two tanks with a total capacity of 20,000 gallons. This water supply before going to the rooms is all filtered and purified. The usual practice on vessels is to supply distilled water for all other purposes. In this case, however, all water will be purified so that there will be no water on the ship which is not perfectly safe to drink.

All living rooms will be heated by electricity and all cooking done on electric ranges. In fact, the electrical equipment thruout the vessel will be complete in every detail.

All auxiliary machinery such as pumps, anchor windlass, mooring winches and winches for opening and closing the hatches will be electrically driven.

Main whistles mounted on the stack will be electrically operated and in this connection there will be installed on the foremast of the vessel an illuminated letter "F" which will flash in unison with the operation of the main whistles. The name "Ford" written in script, mounted on each side of the stack will be artificially illuminated.

The navigating equipment will be the most complete of any ship on the Great Lakes. In addition to the usual outfit of magnetic compasses, deep sea sounding machine and patent log, the ship will be equipped with one main Gyno compass, with five repeaters, a continuous recording log, a continuous sounding machine, a submarine signal device, radio direction finder and draft indicator.

TRIBUTE TO HIS MOTHER

Bishop Earl Cranston Called Her an Autograph Copy of God.

In Girlhood She Was Famed for Her Beauty and in Maturer Life Was Nurse, Adviser, Friend and Helper—Her Faith in God Carried Her On.

A real mother is the first book of God, an autograph copy. She is to her children the ever-present guide, teacher, comforter, inspirer, protector and saviour. They live in her and she in them. She is the sky and horizon of their being. To her they carry their joys and heartbreaks. She is their wisdom, their strength, their confessor and absolver; their very present help in every time of need. All these divine functions are stored and active in motherhood and they are same yesterday, today, and forever.

Such was my mother to all her children. In form, features, complexion, and vivacity she was in girlhood and earlier womanhood far-famed for her beauty. In her maturer years she was community nurse, adviser, friend and helper. She detested caste and held aristocracy in contempt. Her good sense and keen perception of character were proverbial among all classes. She was fond of head games, and kept up on public affairs.

At twenty-five she had seen and suffered enough to have subdued her spirit and her ready humor, had she not seasoned rather than wilted under it all. Her elastic temperament and faith in God carried her thru.

Left fatherless at twelve, the eldest of four children dependent on their mother's efforts for support, she was denied educational opportunities beyond the earliest; but at sixteen she had learned enough to teach a country school. Her love of reading did the rest for her mind.

It was in a country school that my father, returning from his business in the south to visit his aged mother, found her. He took his girl wife to Louisiana, where he died a few weeks later of yellow fever. She returned to her mother. Up to my tenth year she was both mother and father to me. An expert seamstress, she made men's clothing for merchants of the village. We were poor, but never suffered for food or from the cold.

Thus was her soul disciplined. She was faithful to the little Methodist church and found comfort and guidance in the class meetings and the circuit preachers' sermons.

In my tenth year, by a good providence of poverty, she was able to buy me a third reader, just when the young teacher imported from northern Ohio said I needed it. He finally called to ask permission to give it to me. The courtship was a veritable romance. They lived together fifty years. He taught me for six years, then took up the law, and I went to college. He kept me at it by hard work in extra hours, even against my desire to become self-supporting.

Yes, my mother was a wise woman. She died at seventy-six, while I was on the ocean nearing India. Her blessing at our parting in 1898 was "The Lord go with you, my boy, and bring you safely home when your work is done." I never saw her again; but her hand still rests on my head, and her words have not lost their meaning.

Judge Langdon died while I was bishop resident in Washington. His last words to me about mother were, "Earl, your mother was a wonderful woman;" and she was.—Bishop Earl Cranston in Western Christian Advocate.

The new vessel will go into service about July 15, joining the Henry Ford II, which was launched about two months ago and will carry iron ore from the Ford mines in northern Michigan to the great blast furnaces at the River Rouge plant of the company at Detroit. On trips from Detroit the boats will carry Ford coal to the upper peninsula of Michigan.

The Benson Ford, which will be one of the largest lake freighters, is of standard type lake bulk freight steamer design, 612 feet over all, with a 62 foot beam and a cargo carrying capacity of 13,000 tons. It will carry a crew of approximately forty men.

Like the Henry Ford II, it is a motor ship, operated by a Diesel engine of the Sun Doxford two cycle type which will develop 3,000 horse power. Tanks with a capacity of 300 tons will carry fuel, oil for the operation of the main engines and the auxiliary Diesel motors which will drive the electric generators to provide electric current for the operation of the many pumps and auxiliaries.

The fresh water supply for the cabins is carried in two tanks with a total capacity of 20,000 gallons. This water supply before going to the rooms is all filtered and purified. The usual practice on vessels is to supply distilled water for all other purposes. In this case, however, all water will be purified so that there will be no water on the ship which is not perfectly safe to drink.

All living rooms will be heated by electricity and all cooking done on electric ranges. In fact, the electrical equipment thruout the vessel will be complete in every detail.

All auxiliary machinery such as pumps, anchor windlass, mooring winches and winches for opening and closing the hatches will be electrically driven.

Main whistles mounted on the stack will be electrically operated and in this connection there will be installed on the foremast of the vessel an illuminated letter "F" which will flash in unison with the operation of the main whistles. The name "Ford" written in script, mounted on each side of the stack will be artificially illuminated.

The navigating equipment will be the most complete of any ship on the Great Lakes. In addition to the usual outfit of magnetic compasses, deep sea sounding machine and patent log, the ship will be equipped with one main Gyno compass, with five repeaters, a continuous recording log, a continuous sounding machine, a submarine signal device, radio direction finder and draft indicator.

TRIBUTE TO HIS MOTHER

Bishop Earl Cranston Called Her an Autograph Copy of God.

In Girlhood She Was Famed for Her Beauty and in Maturer Life Was Nurse, Adviser, Friend and Helper—Her Faith in God Carried Her On.

A real mother is the first book of God, an autograph copy. She is to her children the ever-present guide, teacher, comforter, inspirer, protector and saviour. They live in her and she in them. She is the sky and horizon of their being. To her they carry their joys and heartbreaks. She is their wisdom, their strength, their confessor and absolver; their very present help in every time of need. All these divine functions are stored and active in motherhood and they are same yesterday, today, and forever.

Such was my mother to all her children. In form, features, complexion, and vivacity she was in girlhood and earlier womanhood far-famed for her beauty. In her maturer years she was community nurse, adviser, friend and helper. She detested caste and held aristocracy in contempt. Her good sense and keen perception of character were proverbial among all classes. She was fond of head games, and kept up on public affairs.

At twenty-five she had seen and suffered enough to have subdued her spirit and her ready humor, had she not seasoned rather than wilted under it all. Her elastic temperament and faith in God carried her thru.

Left fatherless at twelve, the eldest of four children dependent on their mother's efforts for support, she was denied educational opportunities beyond the earliest; but at sixteen she had learned enough to teach a country school. Her love of reading did the rest for her mind.

It was in a country school that my father, returning from his business in the south to visit his aged mother, found her. He took his girl wife to Louisiana, where he died a few weeks later of yellow fever. She returned to her mother. Up to my tenth year she was both mother and father to me. An expert seamstress, she made men's clothing for merchants of the village. We were poor, but never suffered for food or from the cold.

Thus was her soul disciplined. She was faithful to the little Methodist church and found comfort and guidance in the class meetings and the circuit preachers' sermons.

In my tenth year, by a good providence of poverty, she was able to buy me a third reader, just when the young teacher imported from northern Ohio said I needed it. He finally called to ask permission to give it to me. The courtship was a veritable romance. They lived together fifty years. He taught me for six years, then took up the law, and I went to college. He kept me at it by hard work in extra hours, even against my desire to become self-supporting.

Yes, my mother was a wise woman. She died at seventy-six, while I was on the ocean nearing India. Her blessing at our parting in 1898 was "The Lord go with you, my boy, and bring you safely home when your work is done." I never saw her again; but her hand still rests on my head, and her words have not lost their meaning.

Judge Langdon died while I was bishop resident in Washington. His last words to me about mother were, "Earl, your mother was a wonderful woman;" and she was.—Bishop Earl Cranston in Western Christian Advocate.
